Allied Health Professionals Networking Group meetings

Allied health and general practice: Networking and collaboration

Primary Health Tasmania warmly invites allied health professionals, general practitioners, practice nurses and practice managers to the first meetings for 2017 entitled Allied health and general practice: Networking and collaboration.

The aim of these evening events is to discuss how we can best work together to provide coordinated care for patients with chronic disease.

A case study will be used to explore how we can collaborate in the primary care space. A networking activity will follow.

Bring your business cards and brochures for display and distribution.

Primary Health Tasmania established the Allied Health Professionals Networking Group as a forum to support allied health professionals working in primary health in Tasmania through networking, professional development and collaboration with other providers.
